

Sunday, September 18, 2011

“Sustaining Life in a Climate Changing World: How Human Health Depends on Biodiversity”

Speaker: Aaron Bernstein, MD, MPH, Acting Associate Director of the Center for Health and the Global Environment at Harvard Medical School and pediatrician at Children’s Hospital, Boston

Dr. Bernstein’s talk will focus on the intersection of climate change, biodiversity and human health in this century.

Download the Poster.

Read the article in the newspaper. With Nobel Eric Chivian, he co-edited the Oxford University Press book which received the distinction of best biology book of 2008 from the Library Journal along with Bert Holldobler and E.O. Wilson’s The Superorganism.

Lexington MinuteMan Peace Prize Laureate authored and co-edited book Sustaining Life, distinction of best

Talk sponsored by LexGWAC – Lexington Global Warming Action Coalition

Co-sponsored by the Lexington League of Women Voters, Sustainable Lexington, Sustainable Arlington, and Sustainable Belmont